H.R. 3676

Santa Rosa and San Jacinto Mountains National Monument Act of 2000

As cleared by the Congress on October 5, 2000

H.R. 3676 would establish the Santa Rosa and San Jacinto Mountains National Monument on about 272,000 acres of land in California. Of the lands that would be included in the monument, about 152,000 acres are federally owned and administered by the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) and the Forest Service; the rest of the lands are owned by state, tribal, or private entities. Subject to valid existing rights, H.R. 3676 would withdraw federal lands within the proposed national monument from entry, appropriation, or disposal under the public land laws and from mining, mineral leasing, and geothermal leasing. Enacting those provisions would result in forgone offsetting receipts from those lands over the next five years; therefore, pay-as-you-go procedures would apply. Based on information from BLM and the Forest Service, however, CBO estimates that any such effects would be negligible.
