H.R. 2092
Kingman and Heritage Islands Act of 2009

As ordered reported by the House Committee on Oversight and Government Reform on September 10, 2009

H.R. 2092 would amend the National Children's Island Act of 1995 to clarify that the District of Columbia may use two islands located in the Anacostia River for recreational, environmental, or educational purposes. In addition, the legislation would amend the terms of the reversionary interest in the islands held by the federal government. (Under reversionary interest, ownership of property that has been conveyed may revert to the federal government in certain circumstances).

Title to the two islands was conveyed to the District government in 1997 for recreational use, and the federal government has no plans to reclaim the properties. CBO estimates that enacting H.R. 2092 would have no significant impact on the federal budget and would not affect direct spending or revenues. H.R. 2092 contains no intergovernmental or private-sector mandates as defined in the Unfunded Mandates Reform Act and would impose no costs on state, local, or tribal governments.

The CBO staff contact for this estimate is Matthew Pickford. The estimate was approved by Theresa Gullo, Deputy Assistant Director for Budget Analysis.
