

CBO's Recent Publications and Work in Progress as of September 30, 2021

OCTOBER 2021

To provide the Congress with a comprehensive review of its work, the Congressional Budget Office publishes quarterly reports, like this one, highlighting recent work and summarizing work in progress.¹

Recent Work

Over the past three months, CBO has provided a variety of budget and economic analyses, fulfilling the agency's core mission of supporting the Congress during each stage of the legislative process.

The agency has published 104 cost estimates for legislation that was reported by a committee or that was the subject of a motion to be placed on the consensus calendar. Among other work was CBO's estimate that the Infrastructure Investment and Jobs Act would increase federal budget deficits by $256 billion over the 2021–2031 period. CBO was also focused on providing technical assistance to the Congress as legislative proposals affecting health care, income security, and infrastructure were developed.

In addition, since its last quarterly report on work in progress, CBO has released 17 reports and working papers; they satisfied statutory requirements, fulfilled Congressional requests, or provided economic and budgetary analysis or technical information (see Table 1 on page 5).

Some of those publications provided analysis of the economic and budgetary situation. On July 21, the agency published additional information about the budget and economic outlook. Later that month, CBO published an analysis of some proposals in the President's budget request for fiscal year 2022. Each month, CBO issued its Monthly Budget Review, an analysis of federal spending and revenues for the previous month and the fiscal year to date. CBO also released an update to its annual report about whether enacted legislation for the current fiscal year has exceeded statutory caps on discretionary budget authority and will trigger a cancellation of budgetary resources, or sequestration. Because the caps expire at the end of this year, there can be no projection of those caps for next year; therefore, CBO published a blog post rather than a full report. CBO also published two updates to its report on federal debt and the statutory limit, one in July and the other in September.

CBO also provided the Congress with in-depth analysis of policies affecting national security and veterans. The agency published Alternative Approaches to Adjusting Military Cash Pay and an assessment of the Navy's fiscal year 2022 shipbuilding plan. Another report described the guaranteed home loan program run by the Department of Veterans Affairs, including its effects on the federal budget. Another described the effects of large-scale maintenance actions on the availability of the Air Force's aircraft.

Other publications included an analysis of the effects of physical infrastructure spending on the economy and an analysis of the distribution of income in 2018 and the impact of federal policies, including recently enacted tax changes, on that distribution.

Finally, some of CBO's recent publications explained how the agency does its work. A working paper described CBO's model and projections of U.S. international investment holdings and income flows. Another working paper presented the agency's simulation model of new drug development. A third working paper described CBO's assessment of the distributional effects of reducing carbon dioxide emissions with a carbon tax. A slide deck furnished technical details about how CBO models the effects of climate change in its economic projections. CBO also published a description of the budgetary effects of major laws enacted in response to the 2020–2021 coronavirus pandemic, an overview of legislation enacted in December 2020 and March 2021. The new document is a companion to a similar description published in June 2020.

Work in Progress

As of September 30, CBO was working on 191 cost estimates for legislation that had been ordered reported by a committee or that was the subject of a motion to be placed on the consensus calendar (see Table 2 on page 6). In addition, the agency was working on 28 analytic products that it expected to complete in the coming months.

Six requested products were in progress as of September 30:

- A report describing trends in spending on prescription drugs, as well as trends in their use and prices;
- A report that describes the prices paid for health care by private insurers, how those prices differ from prices paid by Medicare, and how they affect federal subsidies for health care;
- An analysis of the distribution of certain tax expenditures;
- An analysis of the effects of work requirements and programs that support work in means-tested transfer programs;
- A report describing trends in the distribution of family wealth; and
- A report on the budgetary cost of Ginnie Mae and its role in the secondary mortgage market.

CBO has many other products in the research, drafting, and editing stages that support its mission of furnishing the Congress with timely analysis of policy issues. Many of those products offer additional insight into CBO's earlier products or ongoing work.

Some of those products will provide information about CBO's analyses of labor markets, taxation of earnings, and health care markets:

- An assessment of the effects on the federal budget of changes in the distribution of earnings (published on October 5) and
- A technical description of the data and methods used for constructing synthetic firms in HISIM2 (CBO's health insurance simulation model).

Some will provide information about CBO's other microeconomic and tax analyses:

- An analysis of the amount of fiscal substitution that occurs in response to federal grants for capital spending on highways;
- A short report on reauthorizing federal spending for transit systems;
- A description of how CBO models effective tax rates on capital income; and
- An explanation of why CBO applies a revenue offset to estimates of changes in excise taxes and certain other taxes.

Some will provide information about CBO's macroeconomic analyses:

- An assessment of the macroeconomic effects of illustrative single-payer health care systems;
- An examination of how consumers and firms form expectations of inflation;
- A review of the accuracy of CBO's past macroeconomic forecasts;
- A technical description of a model CBO uses to inform its projections of the unemployment rate and the implications for business cycles;
- An analysis of the causes and consequences of fiscal crises; and
- An examination of the economic effects of waiting to resolve long-term budgetary imbalances.

Others will explain or support the analytic methods used for CBO's financial analyses and budgetary estimates or provide background information:

- A description of CBO's estimates of the cost of federal credit programs in 2022 (published on October 6);
- An explanation of CBO's forecast of the Federal Reserve's balance sheet, its direct and indirect implications for the federal budget, and its connection to CBO's forecast of Federal Reserve policies;
- An explanation of how CBO analyzes uncertainty surrounding projections in The Long-Term Budget Outlook;
- A description of how a reduction in spending for national defense might affect the size and capability of the military;
- A review of the accuracy of CBO's baseline budget projections;
- An explanation of how CBO updated its model for estimating the gross revenues that would result from imposing a price on emissions of carbon dioxide;
- Projections of federal receipts and expenditures in the national income and product accounts;
- A glossary of some of the most commonly used terms in CBO's budget analyses;
- An updated version of CBO's interactive tool for analyzing options related to the size of the military; and
- A description of how CBO estimates the fair value of mortgage guarantees, using prices from private mortgage insurers.

When the publication of an analytic report draws near, CBO announces its upcoming release.² Upon completion, all reports are available to the public on CBO's website.

The Congressional Budget Office prepares this report each quarter to help keep the Congress informed about the agency's work. Lara Robillard coordinated this edition, with guidance from Leigh Angres and with contributions from many people at CBO. Jeffrey Kling reviewed the report, and Benjamin Plotinsky was the editor.

The report is available on CBO's website (www.cbo.gov/publication/57428). CBO seeks feedback to make its work as useful as possible. Please send any comments to communications@cbo.gov.
